

To whomever makes the decisions within the FDA:

6863 99 MAY 25 10:13

As an American ~~citizen~~ ^{consumer}, the FDA ~~now~~ exists to protect me from buying, using, or ingesting dangerous or harmful things. The effects of long-term ~~regular~~ consumption of radiolytic products, chemical compounds created by irradiation, has never even been studied. How could you guys even consider allowing irradiated foods to be unlabeled as such, when that would ~~mean~~ undermine the consumer's own decision ~~about~~ of whether or not to take such (unnecessary) health risks?!! I am appalled that this organization would sacrifice their very purpose only to further the profit of a very specific industry! Please do your job.

Sincerely,
